Also featured is the “Takes the World” section — a new collection of fragments from the past, like “If I Had a Boat,” “Are You Sleeping?” and “I’m Pregnant.” That group is curated by Chris Smith, and it will be free of charge. The final section of the exhibit is called the “Tandem,” and it showcases various works of the artists on stage with Ramiro. The two will be joined by performer members Caitlin Glass, Justin Clemens, Anohni, Becky Lee, and Peter Zummo, as well as a backing band. “This part of the show is for people who want to be the other side of the couple,” Smith said. “We’ll bring in new compositions by new composers, who have been commissioned to collaborate with the performance.” It will be fascinating to see how the two artists have influenced each other — and vice versa — over time. As a musician I’m particularly curious to see how an electronic-based performer influences a classic songwriter. “Their artwork has this lovely diction,” Ramiro says. “They call it ‘vernacular’ but it’s more like magic, it’s a level of skill that makes my job as a writer much, much easier.” “Ramiro and Eric are great friends,” Smith says. “We’re all working on music together right now. I think it would be fascinating to watch them together. This collaboration happens a lot, and I’m so impressed with the amount of work they can do together.” I highly recommend going to see Ramiro and Eric’s show 3e33713323
