Users can use vba and.net to script any applications in Microsoft Windows. (Previously this was limited to AutoCAD Product Key, but vba can now be used for all applications in the Windows operating system.) This can be used for custom functionality such as creating pivot tables, generating reports, maintaining databases, etc. VBA scripts can also be created that automate a process such as performing a series of steps when a certain event occurs. VBA scripts can even be used to control other applications that interface with AutoCAD. So, my question is, what is the best way to do this in rails? A: This is done using a gem called formtastic. Just in case you want to find the gem just do a search for formtastic ## Description --- This directory contains Python files and shell scripts to help with the build.
