Note The process for both the automatic and manual methods can vary in what it creates. For example, when you drag the cursor over the image of a presentation, a transparent rectangle fills in the image like this: If you drag the rectangle anywhere outside of the screen, it disappears. When you're done with the rectangle, drag it back onto the screen. This is because you're creating a full screen capture, meaning that whatever is outside of the screen is also part of the captured image. If you drop the cursor within the image on a slide or one of the four corners (top-left, top-right, bottom-left, and bottom-right), it creates a single image frame. You can create one image frame by dragging the cursor over the entire slide. You can create multiple images by dragging the cursor over different parts of the slide. This is a great way to create a set of images from one PowerPoint presentation. One thing to note about this method is that the slides are saved with a small embedded thumbnail of the presentation. If you want to see the actual slides,

GIMP: The GNU Image Manipulation Program GIMP is free and open source software that can be downloaded from the gnome website. It offers many tools for modifying photos and importing them into other applications. Gimp has a very simple interface and no instructions or tutorials. You can find a lot of information and tutorials with Google search. Some of the options with Gimp are: Move: To move around an object and place it anywhere you want, select it, and click and drag. Shear: To move, scale and rotate an object or one part of an object. Select an object and choose shear tools. Mask: A highly versatile tool for creating new objects from existing ones, it's also very helpful to create hard-edged objects like lines and shapes Rotate: Rotate an object. Select an object and choose rotate tools. Affine: To transform an object. Choose affine tools and use invert to flip the image horizontally or vertically. Scale: To scale an object. Choose scale tools and drag to increase or decrease the size of an object. Straighten: To make sure that objects are straight. If the corners of an object are at strange angles, choose straighten tools. Skew: To make an object look skewed or curved. This tool works like the shear tool but it's a bit harder to use. Choose skew tools and adjust the angle and the amount that you want. Flip: A more advanced and detailed version of the rotate tool. Flip also lets you rotate an object the other way. There is a short guide on how to create flowers with Gimp on the wiki. Blur: To blur an image. Choose blur tools and drag around the image. Smooth: To smooth a photo, make the edges more gentle. Choose smooth tools and drag around the photo. Filters: An advance way to change the look of an image, called filters. Choose filters, apply a filter, and see how it works. Cut: To cut an object out of the photo. Darken: To darken an image, choose darken tools and drag over an area of the photo. You can also choose a circle and drag to apply a circle of darkness to the image, and so on. Add: To add a photo or image on top of a photo. 05a79cecff

Q: Can someone help with an English expression that means "play some chess to kill time"? This might sound very strange but hear me out. I've a meeting tomorrow morning with a friend, but since he's a busy director of a bank I do not really know if the meeting will be before noon, so I will play some chess tomorrow. The thing is that chess is kind of a boring game if I don't know what to do. It's supposed to be a competitive game (so I'm not looking for a non-competitive game). I would like to say "I'll play some chess to kill time", but it sounds a bit childish. What is an equivalent expression in a formal way? Is it suitable to use some chess set? A: Hire a chess player to play chess. A: Try chess table. Posted on: April 12, 2011 12:37 PM J.B. Brown, chancellor of the University of Scranton, has been selected to lead the Institute of Faith & Culture at The King's College, New York, which is affiliated with the Reformed Church in America (RCA). Brown, who joined the University of Scranton in October 2007, was unanimously elected to the position of chancellor by the board of trustees, after a national search by a committee comprising board members and member institutions. He will serve the remainder of the term that had expired. "We are very pleased and excited about the opportunity to expand the influence of The King's College in its specific mission to the new century, as well as in its vision for wider horizons in global affairs," said Brown. "The combination of our mature theological resources with the vivid networking possibilities, and the personal conversations we share in our limited community have a great sense of special synergy." Brown holds a master of divinity degree from Westminster Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, a master of arts degree from Westminster Seminary's Graduate School and a bachelor of science degree from Boston University. In addition, Brown holds a doctor of ministry degree from Candler School of Theology. The King's College was founded in 1997 by the RCA to be a center of evangelical and Reformed thought in North America. In addition
